Shun Vanity
“Water is dried up at once if poured on a heap of ashes. Vanity is like this heap of ashes. Prayer and contemplation produce no effect upon the heart puffed up with vanity.”
— Sri Ramakrishna

Renounce fleeting world for God
“Today the human body is, tomorrow it is not; even the shortest span of life is beset with pain and misery. He who is able to renounce all for God’s sake is a living God.”
— Sri Sarada Devi

Rouse yourself for greater cause
“Rouse yourself, therefore, for life is short. There are greater works to be done than aspiring to become lawyers, and picking quarrels, and such things. A far greater work is this sacrifice of yourselves for the benefit of your race, for the welfare of humanity.”
— Swami Vivekananda

Shirk this infatuation! Forward! ‘Be fearless’!
“Behold, how men are already in the jaws of the shark of infatuation! Oh, listen to their piteous heart-rending wails. Advance! Forward! O ye brave souls, to set free those that are in fetters, to lessen the burden of woe of the miserable, and to illumine the abysmal darkness of ignorant hearts. Look, how the Vedanta proclaims by beat of drums, ‘Be fearless!’”
— Swami Vivekananda.

Bhakti Yoga: The need of the Guru

The subject of Bhakti Yoga is carefully expounded by Swami Vivekananda in The Complete Works of Swami Vivekananda Volume 3. The topic ‘The Need of the Guru’ as one aspect of the subject explored provides a careful analysis of the role and attributes of a spiritual teacher or ‘guru’ in spiritual life.

“No one was ever really taught by another; each of us has to teach himself. The external teacher offers only the suggestion which rouses the internal teacher to work to understand things.”
— Swami Vivekananda: Great Sayings; Ramakrishna Mission Institute of Culture; page 44.

Introduction

Each soul is destined to be perfect, and every being, in the end, will attain the state of perfection. Whatever we are now is the result of our acts and thoughts in the past; and whatever we shall be in the future will be the result of what we think and do now. But this, the shaping of our own destinies, does not preclude our receiving help from outside; nay, in the vast majority of cases such help is absolutely necessary. When it comes, the higher powers and possibilities of the soul are quickened, spiritual life is awakened, growth is animated, and man becomes holy and perfect in the end.

To quicken the spirit, the impulse must come from another soul. The person from whose soul such impulse comes is called the Guru - the teacher; and the person to whose soul the impulse is conveyed is called the Shishya - the student. To convey such an impulse to any soul, in the first place, the soul from which it proceeds must possess the power of transmitting it, as it were, to another; and in the second place, the soul to which it is transmitted must be fit to receive it. The seed must be a living seed, and the field must be ready ploughed; and when both these conditions are fulfilled, a wonderful growth of genuine religion takes place.

How to know a teacher, then?

The sun requires no torch to make him visible, we need not light a candle in order to see him. When the sun rises, we instinctively become aware of the fact, and when a teacher of men comes to help us, the soul will instinctively know that truth has already begun to shine upon it. Truth stands on its own evidence, it does not require any other testimony to prove it true, it is self-effulgent. It penetrates into the innermost corners of our nature, and in its presence the whole universe stands up and says, “This is truth.” The teachers whose wisdom and truth shine like the light of the sun are the very greatest the world has known, and they are worshipped as God by the major portion of mankind.

There ought to be certain tests, certain conditions, for the teacher to satisfy as there are also for the taught.

The Teacher

Knowledge of the Scriptures

The teacher needs to know the spirit of the scriptures. The teacher who deals too much in words and allows the mind to be carried away by the force of words loses the spirit. It is the knowledge of the spirit of the scriptures alone that constitutes the true religious teacher. The network of the words of the scriptures is like a huge forest in which the human mind often loses itself and finds no way out. “The network of words is a big forest; it is the cause of a curious wandering of the mind.” The various methods of joining words, of speaking in beautiful language, of explaining the diction of the scriptures do not necessarily lead to the ‘development of spiritual perception.’ According to Swami Vivekananda, the great teachers did not exhibit this method of ‘text-torturing’ as it were; there was no eternal playing upon the meaning of words and their roots. Yet they nobly taught.

Bhagavan Ramakrishna used to tell a story of some men who went into a mango orchard and busied themselves in counting the leaves, the twigs, and the branches, examining their colour, comparing their size, and noting down everything most carefully, and then got up a learned discussion on each of these topics. But one of them, more sensible than the others, did not care for all these things and instead thereof, began to eat the mango fruit. And was he not wise? So leave this ‘leaf counting’ to others. You never see note-taking to others. You never see a strong spiritual man among these ‘leaf counters.’ Religion, the highest aim, the highest glory of man, does not require so much labour. If you want to be a bhakta, it is not at all necessary for you to know whether Krishna was born in Mathura or in Vraja, what he was doing, or just the exact date on which he pronounced the teachings of the Gita. You only require to feel the craving for the beautiful lessons of duty and love in the Gita. All the other particulars about it and its author are for the enjoyment of the learned. Say ‘Shantih, Shantih’ to their learned controversies, and let us ‘eat the mangoes.’

Sinlessness of a teacher

The second condition necessary in the teacher is sinlessness. The question is often asked, ‘Why should we look into the character and personality of a teacher? We have only to judge what he says and take that up.’ This is not right. If a man wants to teach something of dynamics, or chemistry, or any other physical science, he may be anything he likes, because what the physical sciences require is merely an intellectual equipment; but in the spiritual sciences it is impossible from first to last that there can be any spiritual light in the soul that is impure. What religion can an impure man teach? The sine qua non of acquiring spiritual truth for one’s self or for imparting it to others is the purity of heart and soul. A vision of God or a glimpse of the beyond never comes until the soul is pure. Hence with the teacher of religion we must first see what he is, and then what he says. He must be perfectly pure, and then alone comes the value of his words, because he is only then the true ‘transmitter’. What can he transmit if he does not have spiritual powers in himself? There must be the worthy vibration of spirituality in the mind of the teacher, so that it may be sympathetically conveyed to the mind of the taught. The function of the teacher is indeed an affair of the transference of something, and not one of mere stimulation of the existing intellectual or other faculties in the taught. Something real and appreciable as an influence comes from the teacher and goes to the taught. Therefore the teacher must be pure.

Motive of a teacher

The third condition is in regard to the motive. The teacher must not teach with any ulterior selfish motive—for money, name, or fame; his work must be simply out of love, out of pure love for mankind at large. The only medium through which spiritual force can be transmitted is love. Any selfish motive, such as the desire for gain or for name, will immediately destroy this conveying medium. God is love, and only he who has known God as love can be a teacher of godliness and God to man.

When you see that in your teacher these conditions are all fulfilled, you are safe; if they are not, it is unsafe to allow yourself to be taught by him, for there is the great danger that, if he cannot convey goodness to your heart, he may convey wickedness. This danger must by all means be guarded against. “He who is learned in the scriptures, sinless, unpolluted by lust, and is the greatest knower of the Brahman” is the real teacher.

The good and wise teacher

From what has been said, it naturally follows that we cannot be taught to love, appreciate, and assimilate religion everywhere and by everybody. The ‘books in the running brooks, sermons in stones, and good in everything’ is all very true as a poetical figure; but nothing can impart to a man a single grain of truth unless he has the undeveloped germs of it in himself. To whom do the stories and books preach sermons? To the human soul, the lotus of whose inner holy shrine is already quick with life. And the light which causes the beautiful opening out of this lotus comes always from the good and wise teacher. When the heart has thus been opened, it becomes fit to receive teaching from the stones or the brooks, the stars, or the sun, or the moon, or from anything which has its existence in our divine universe; but the unopened heart will see in them nothing but mere stones or mere brooks. A blind man may go to a museum, but he will not profit by it in any way; his eyes must be opened first, and then alone will he be able to learn what the things in the museum can teach.

The teacher – the eye-opener

The eye-opener of the aspirant after religion is the teacher. With the teacher, therefore, our relationship is the same as that between an ancestor and his descendents. Without faith, humility, submission, and veneration in our hearts towards our religious teacher, there cannot be any growth of religion in us; and it is a significant fact that, where this kind of relation between the teacher and the taught prevails, there alone gigantic spiritual men are growing; while in places which have neglected to keep up this kind of relation the religious teacher has become a mere lecturer, the teacher expecting his five dollars and the person taught expecting his brain to be filled with the teacher’s words, and each going his own way after this much has been done. Under such circumstances spirituality becomes almost an unknown quantity. There is none to transmit it and none to have it transmitted to. Religion with such people becomes business; they think they can obtain it with their dollars. Would to God that religion could be obtained so easily! But unfortunately it cannot be.

Conclusion

Religion, which is the highest knowledge and the highest wisdom, cannot be bought, nor can it be acquired from books. You may thrust your head into all the corners of the world, you may explore the Himalayas, the Alps, and the Caucasus, you may sound the bottom of the sea and pry into every nook of Tibet and the desert of Gobi, you will not find it anywhere until your heart is ready for receiving it and your teacher has come. And when that divinely appointed teacher comes, serve him with child-like confidence and simplicity, freely open your heart to his influence, and see in him God manifested. Those who come to seek truth with such a spirit of love and veneration, to them the Lord of Truth reveals the most wonderful things regarding truth, goodness, and beauty.

Love is the law of life

"All love is expansion, all selfishness is contraction. Love is therefore the only law of life. He who loves lives, he who is selfish is dying. Therefore love for love's sake, because it is law of life, just as you breathe to live.

— Swami Vivekananda
Pilgrimage

A couple of weeks after the passing away of Sri Ramakrishna, the grief-stricken Holy Mother left for a pilgrimage accompanied by Golap-Ma, Lakshmi, M’s wife, Kali, Jogin, and Latu. They first stopped at Deoghar and then, after visiting Varanasi and Ayodhya, arrived at Vrindaban. Once Sri Ramakrishna had told Kali, “There is a particular manifestation of Krishna in you.” During his stay in Vrindaban, Kali visited many temples and meditated on Krishna. Kali was very austere and adventurous.

At the Baranagore Monastery

Narendra and the other disciples rented a house in Baranagore at ten rupees per month and established the first Ramakrishna monastery. As soon as Kali heard about the Baranagore Monastery he returned to Calcutta and joined the brotherhood. The southernmost room of the second floor was used for meditation and study, and was known as Kali Tapasvi’s Room since Kali secluded himself there during most of the day. An ascetic by nature, he ate vegetarian food, wore no shoes, and shunned people’s company. He spent his time in meditation, studying the scriptures, and composing some Sanskrit hymns on Sri Ramakrishna and Holy Mother. One day Kali visited Holy Mother at her residence at Nilmabar Babu’s house in Belur, and read a hymn that he had composed about her: Prakritim paramam abhyam varadam, etc. After listening to the hymn, Holy Mother blessed him, saying, “May Saraswati, the Goddess of learning, sit on your tongue.”

When someone in the Baranagore Monastery complained that Kali was not taking any responsibility for the household work, Narendra said, “Let one of the brothers be a scholar and I’ll do the dishes myself.” One day Mahendranath Datta, one of Narendra’s brothers, was shocked when he saw Kali lying like a dead person in the sun on the dusty floor of the veranda. Jogin told him with a smile, “He is not dead. The rascal meditates that way.” Sometimes the disciples would tease and make fun with each other. Ramakrishna had given them the taste of true spirituality; he did not care for ‘dry monks.’

Understanding of the brother disciples

Poverty and hardship could not dampen the spirit of the disciples. They had mutual love, respect, and deep understanding. One night Kali was shivering with cold and could not sleep, as none of them had warm clothing or sufficient blankets. When Kali told Narendra about his suffering, Narendra got up at 2 a.m. and made hot tea for his brother. He told Kali, “Enjoy this hot cup of tea and get rid of the cold.” He also teased him, “This hot cup of tea seems to me more concrete than your blessed theory of Advaita, don’t you think so, Kali?” Love and service bring solidarity to the Order, not rules and regulations.

Discussions with Swami Vivekananda

Kali was well versed in both Eastern and Western philosophies, and enjoyed discussions with Narendra. Latu recalled:

“Brother Kali was often busy studying the scriptures and other books. During rare leisure moments he would debate with Brother Loren [Narendra]. Loren used to silence him very easily, but one day Kali cornered Loren in an argument so well that Loren could not give a reply. Then Loren said, “Let us stop here today. Tomorrow we shall start again from this same point.” Brother Kali was very happy for the time being. But the next day Loren began giving new arguments that refuted Kali’s points, and Kali had to admit he was beaten. “I couldn’t defeat Loren for a single day!” he said regretfully. But I told him: “Brother, it is bound to be so. Brother Loren is our leader. How can you surpass him?”

Vows of Sannyasa

One day Narendra proposed to the brotherhood that they all take the vows of sannyasa according to scriptural injunction. All agreed. When Kali told them that he had a copy of the viraja-homa mantras, which he had gotten from a monk in Gaya, his brothers were excited, knowing that this was the Master’s divine grace. In the third week of January 1887, they took final monastic vows by performing the traditional viraja homa in front of the Master’s picture. Narendra gave Kali the name ‘Swami Abhedananda.’

From Baranagore to Alambazar

In 1892 the Ramakrishna Monastery was moved from Baranagore to Alambazar, not far from Dakshineswar temple garden. Ramakrishnananda and Saradananda cordially received Abhedananda and arranged a private room for him in the monastery. The monks and devotees named it ‘Kali Vedanti’s Room’ because he spent most of the time there practising meditation and studying Vedanta.

In England and America

In accordance with Swami Vivekananda’s request Swami Abhedananda left for London in mid-August 1896. A month after his arrival Swami Vivekananda announced that Swami Abhedananda would speak on Hinduism. He based his lecture on the Panchadashī, an authoritative text on Vedanta. On 27th October 1896 he gave his maiden speech before the learned audience of the Christo-Theosophical Society at Bloomsbury Square in London. Swami Vivekananda was fully confident that even in his absence Abhedananda would be able to carry on the Vedanta work in London. Swami Vivekananda entrusted him with his classes on Vedanta and Raja Yoga and left for India in December 1896. For one year Swami Abhedananda continued to give classes and lectures in different churches and religious and philosophical societies in London and its suburbs. His eloquence, lucid exposition of Vedanta philosophy, and his depth of spiritual realization made a profound impression on his audiences.

Swami Vivekananda then requested Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so on 31st July 1897 Swami Abhedananda left for New York and arrived there on 31st July 1897 Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Vivekananda then requested Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Vivekananda then requested Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Vivekananda then requested Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Vivekananda then requested Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Vivekananda then requested Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so Swami Abhedananda to carry on the Vedanta work in the United States. so

Swami Abhedananda had gathered tremendous experience from travelling and lecturing extensively in Europe and America for twenty-five years. Since his arrival in the West in 1896, he had crossed the Atlantic seventeen times and had carried the message of Vedanta to innumerable people. His writings also made a tremendous impact on the Western mind.

Back to India

On 10th November 1921 Swami Abhedananda reached Calcutta and then went to Belur Math by car. It was noon, and the shrine was closed, but a monk opened it so that Swami Abhedananda could bow down to the Master.

Ramakrishna Vedanta Ashrama

In 1923 the Swami established the Ramakrishna Vedanta Society in Calcutta and undertook the role as president. In 1924 he opened a branch of the Society at Darjeeling under the name of Ramakrishna Vedanta Ashrama. The Swami remained a trustee of the Ramakrishna Math and Mission all through his life, but his organisation gradually became separated from the Ramakrishna Order.

Last days

In the early part of May 1937 Swami Abhedananda left for Darjeeling, his favourite place. There, amidst nature’s panoramic beauty and silence, he would remain absorbed in meditation, study and writing. Most of his books and profound writings were done there. He would get up early in the morning and meditate; then, facing the peaks of the Himalayas, he would take his breakfast. Afterwards he would go for a long walk, alone, and then from 9.00 a.m. to 11.00 a.m. he would write. After his bath, he would meditate for another hour and then have lunch.

After lunch he would read a newspaper, usually the Statesman, and then would take some rest. Again he would write from 3.00 to 5.00 p.m., and then go for a walk. In the evening he would meet devotees and visitors and talk to them on various topics. After dedicating the shrine of Sri Ramakrishna on 29th August 1937, Swami Abhedananda left Darjeeling on 21st September. It had been his last visit.

His life’s work done, he silently began to prepare himself for his final journey. On his seventy-third birthday he said to one of his disciples, “I am only an instrument in the blissful sportive play of the Master, and the moment my life’s mission is over, I shall not wait even for a second longer.”

Swami Abhedananda was virtually bedridden for the last year and a half of his life. Even in that condition, every night after supper his disciples would read the manuscript of his lectures and he would dictate corrections. On 14th December 1938, in spite of his severe illness, he went to Belur Math to attend the dedication ceremony of Sri Ramakrishna’s marble statue in the new temple. While Swami Vijnananananda was installing the relics of the Master in the altar, Swami Abhedananda stood motionless, listening to the monks singing a hymn he had composed for the Master during his Baranagore days. It was his last visit to Belur Math.

Swami Abhedananda had played his part in the divine drama of Sri Ramakrishna. Gradually the great yogi made ready to return to his beloved guru. Towards the end he indicated that his body should be cremated at the Cossipore cremation ground after his death. On 7th September 1939 he followed his regular routine. But in the evening he had a high temperature that continued throughout the night. His disciples served him around the clock. In the morning he felt a little better, and asked his attendants to give him a glass of water. He sat on his bed and lay down. Swami Abhedananda passed away shortly after, at 8.16 a.m. on Friday, 8th September 1939.

The news of his death spread throughout the city and an announcement was broadcast by All India Radio. His body was carried in procession and cremated at Cossipore cremation ground. His disciples followed his last request: “Make a little place for me at the feet of the Master.”

Final message

Towards the end of his life, this great Vedantin, Abhedananda told his disciples, “Tapasya or austerity enhances will-power. Have self-confidence. Think: I am a child of Immortal Bliss. The Infinite power is playing within me. If you have this conviction, you will conquer the world.”

The hymn entitled Sri Sarada Devi Stotram was composed by Swami Abhedananda. A translation of this poem in English is given below:

To the Divine Sakti (Power) embodied in a human form, To the giver of boons and the asylum to those afflicted with fears, To the redresser of man’s miseries and the generator of joy in the hearts of devotees, To Thee my salutations! O Supreme Being, Mother of the worlds! Redeem Thy children by Thy mercy worthless, sinful and deluded though they may be, A veritable ship ferrying them across the ocean of Samsara, that Thou art. To Thee my salutations, O Supreme Being, O Mother of the worlds! Abandoning the flowers of worldly enjoyments, imbibe O Honeybee of my mind! The nectar of the lotus of Mother’s feet, the sure panacea for the disease of worldliness. To Thee my salutations, O Supreme Being, O Mother of the worlds! Bestow Thy grace, O great Divinity, on us, Thy children,

Teachings of Swami Abhedananda
Self-confidence, Faith and Worship
Through self-confidence you will accomplish everything. When you walk in the Street, do not move as if a slave is going or as if somebody has raised a whip over your head. Do not be frightened but walk like a man. Stand up, raise your head and walk like a gentleman. Do not be afraid of anything. The higher nature is already within you. Realise it, control your lower mind and passions for the time being, then you will be able to live on the spiritual plane as the master over sense-pleasures.

Realise that the power to save yourself will not come to you unless you have faith in yourself, unless you know that God is within you and unless you become fearless.

Faith brings out the power of the mind. Faith is always constructive while doubt is destructive. Faith strengthens. It is an affirmation. You say with full energy that it will be so and it will happen so. But if you vacillate and doubt, you would not be able to reach the highest results.

That faith is beneficial which is founded upon right knowledge, right reason and is supported by proper evidence.

Intense longing, unswerving devotion and wholehearted love of the soul draw out from the infinite source any particular form which the devotee wishes to see and worship; they have the power, as it were, to condense and solidify the water of the ocean of Reality into various forms.

If we worship God through ignorance, it does not do any good. And that is not the right way of worship; that is mere form.
